Police said Olinger's car was struck by the Fleschman automobile, each car suffering $150 damage. The Olinger car was forced into one owned by Clark N. Hartman, Biglerville R. 2. Damage to the Hartman car was estimated at $5.

REV. W. E. FISHER
SAYS LINCOLN'S
PLEA IS URGENT

"The words spoken by President Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg in 1863 that we, the living, 'should highly resolve that these honored dead shall not have died in vain' are as applicable today as they were 89 years ago," Rev. Wallace E. Fisher, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church here, said Saturday afternoon at the annual Memorial exercises at Bendersville.

The services were held in the Bendersville Cemetery following a parade through part of the town. Rev. Dr. O. D. Coble served as master of ceremonies. Don Coble read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. The Rev. William Jay gave the invocation and benediction. Music was furnished by the Biglerville High School Band. The Ira Lady American Legion Post provided the Legion ritual and firing squad.

"Nine decades, four generations, separate us from Lincoln," Rev. Fisher declared. "Today we are trustees of the spiritual legacy left us by the death of 1,000,000 men and women who died for America in wars from the Revolution until the Korean.

"Lincoln's plea is thus more significant today than ever. The question of course is how to best live to honor those who died, for it is by our lives, what we do, that we either honor or dishonor those who died to give us the liberties we have today.

"One of the best ways we can honor the dead is to check the current flight from responsibility, to admit within ourselves that we are responsible, that every action, every word, every thing we do has its effect on both ourselves, our immediate neighbors and on the world. If we realize that any action of nations, of the world, has its cause and results in the actions of the millions of individuals who make up the world, then we realize that our every action has its effect on the world and we are responsible for what goes on in the world.

"If we realize that, we will so live and act that we can bring honor to these heroic dead, and carry on the noble traditions they handed down to us."

SAYS MEMORIAL DAY IS TIME FOR REMEMBERING

"Memorial Day is the time for remembering and a time for resolving," Dr. W. C. Waltemyer, head of the Bible Department at Gettysburg College, declared in an address at the Arentsville Memorial Day services Sunday afternoon in Greenmount cemetery.

"Periodically we recall with affection and gratitude those who have given up their lives that ours may be richer and fuller," he said, in making a plea "for dedicated lives."

"We shall never forget or fail to honor them, but we honor them best by dedicating and rededicating ourselves to ideals in realization of which they lived faithfully and died heroically.

"These times, marked by so much fear and suspicion, greed and dishonesty, hate and strife, demand such dedication. The very sacrifice of our youth should inspire such dedication. They have pointed the way to spiritual growth and achievement. It is always the way of sacrifice. The ideals which challenge us today are character, unselfish service and faith."

The services in the cemetery followed a parade which formed at the square at 1:30 p.m. Both the parade and the Memorial Day program were sponsored by the Ira E. Lady Post of the American Legion of Biglerville. The latter's color guard and firing squad participated in the program.

GAR SERVICES
ARE CONDUCTED
HERE ON SUNDAY

"The Ongoing Battle of Life" was the theme of the Memorial address delivered by the Rev. Dr. Harold Dunkelberger, of the Gettysburg College faculty, at the annual Grand Army of the Republic services held Sunday afternoon at the GAR post rooms, E. Middle St., under auspices of the Sons of Union Veterans.

"We hear many statements about the search for peace," Rev. Dr. Dunkelberger said, "but from the beginning of time life has been a struggle. We can go back even to the writings of St. Augustine himself to see that battle has been an inherent part of life.

"Thus we are wise to look on the struggle of life and see what guides we can find for glorious accomplishment within and despite the struggles and battles of life.

Cites Three Guides

"There are three guides we can have. First there is a need for participation in life, the need to overcome what we could call 'observational.' Just as the soldier on the battlefield dislikes the observer who comes forth from his comfortable residence in the rear of the battlefield to look briefly upon the carnage and then returns to his comforts, so those who participate in life, who take part in the struggle, must look with distaste on those who seek to be ever a watcher of what occurs, but who never enter (Please Turn to Page 3)

"THIS IS GOD'S WORLD...RULE"
SAYS SPEAKER

"It is for the living, here and now, to highly resolve that our honored dead shall not have died in vain," the Rev. Wallace E. Fisher, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, declared, in a Memorial Day address at Biglerville Sunday afternoon, sponsored by the Ira E. Lady Post of the American Legion, Biglerville.

"These honored dead shall not have died in vain if we, the living, deepen our appreciation of the awful fact that we are the 'trustees' of more than 1,000,000 American military deaths since 1776; if we, the living, stop thinking and doing the things that lead to war, even while we talk peace; and if we, the living, recover the dynamic faith that this is God's world and God's principles rule.

"Mr. Lincoln came to Gettysburg on November 19, 1863, to offer a few dedicatory remarks as the National Cemetery was set aside. In less than four minutes this socially un-couth man, lacking in formal education, had deposited a classic which would endure with the English language.

Heavy Cost For Freedom

"In the course of his brief remarks, President Lincoln pleaded 'that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain.'"

"The price of freedom and union and human dignity was running high in late 1863 and it would be tragically higher before General Lee surrendered at Appomattox Court House. Indeed, more than 630,000 soldiers, North and South, died from all causes along the bloody, exhausting road that stretched from Fort Sumter to Appomattox. Those too, (Please Turn to Page 2)

Two Chinese Companies Are Stopped By UN
On War Front

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — United Nations troops today threw back a change-of-pace assault by two re-organized Chinese companies on the Korean Western Front. The U. S. Eighth Army said they killed or wounded more than 100 attacking Reds in a furious five-hour fight.

It was the first time in weeks that the Reds had struck in greater than platoon strength. A Chinese company normally contains about 150 men.

Patrol contracts up to four hours and 20 minutes in length and light Communist probes were reported from other sectors.

U. S. jet pilots reported they shot down four Communist MIG-15 jets Sunday and damaged another.

Far East Air Forces said its warplanes cut North Korean railroad tracks in 145 places and destroyed 160 Communist vehicles.

Resume Talks Tuesday

MUNSAI, Korea (AP) — United Nations truce delegates return to Panmunjom tomorrow to learn if a three-day cooling off recess has cracked the Communist stand on armistice in Korea.

The explosive issue alone blocks an armistice in Korea.

The Communists demand all their captured soldiers back — at the point of a bayonet if necessary. But the U. N. Command has been equally firm. It says no prisoner will be forcibly returned to the Reds. An Allied screening showed only 70,000 of 169,000 Red POWs and internees want to go back to Communist areas.

WEST GERMAN, APPLIED PEACE PACT SIGNED TODAY IN BONN

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
BONN, Germany (U)—The Allied-West German peace pact signed here today by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France.

As a silent crowd of several hundred Germans stood roff in the main outside the West German Parliament building, the four men put their pens to the historic pact in the Bundesratsaal, the chamber of the upper house. About 500 spectators watched inside the room.

The peace pact, which faces high parliamentary hurdles before ratification can make it effective, gives West Germany near sovereignty in exchange for German troops in the projected European army.

Brief Speeches
Adenauer and the three Western ministers — Dean Acheson of the U. S., Anthony Eden of Britain and Robert Schuman of France—spoke briefly before they signed.

Across the Iron Curtain, Pravda, the Moscow mouthpiece of East Germany's Russian Communist controllers, saluted the pact with another blast at the "fatal, anti-national policy of the Bonn government of Adenauer which is trying to transform the Germans into cannon fodder for the American imperialists."

Eden was the first to sign the contract, followed by Schuman and Acheson. Last came Adenauer, the 78-year-old chancellor-foreign minister who through eight months of negotiations has fought to regain his vanquished country's place in Europe and to align it with the Western world.

MISS ALLISON

always triumphed over the forces of tyranny, according to the speaker. Even though "we can hope that again such will be the case, the Western democracies must be prepared for a long struggle," she said.

It is necessary to make every effort to keep the peace, said the speaker, if we are to save our culture and civilization. The responsibility for this lies largely with the people because a democratic government can be only as strong as are the people who make it.

Miss Allison warned "that the easy path without discipline and responsibility that tends to be the course pursued today might easily spell disaster unless we awake in time to its dangers." She appealed for defenses strong enough to deter an aggressor from starting an all-out war and for the people of the free world to use wisdom and courage in the contest which we must face in the future making "honest government, civic responsibility, social conscience and human understanding the area where the real battle is fought."

to those who come after us. We have no right to destroy the earth for our own wealth.

200 Attend Service
"And we have a responsibility to people. No man can live for himself alone. In fact our responsibility to people is the main thing in our lives. We must give of ourselves if we are to have value."

"And our responsibility to earthly things and to those about us can be summed up by stating that a man is responsible for those things that he can take with him when he dies, a knowledge that his life has been one of service and of value to God and man."

About 200 attended the service. The Rev. S. William Hollingsworth delivered the invocation and Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Members of the Ira Lady post of the American Legion provided the Legion services. Miss Edna Jane Coble recited "In Flanders Field." Benediction was by the Rev. Mr. Howe.

usable, and we have seen great bridges, hospitals, recreation centers and similar structures erected as memorials to those who have made great contributions to the world, or to memorialize some turning point in history.

"But the question can be raised as to whether either of these ideas truly memorializes the great men and great times we seek to remember. Ours is a great land full of good things and with a great heritage passed on to us by the great godly men and women in whose memory we are now meeting.

"The only memorial that would in any sense be worthy would be the memorial of a life dedicated to the highest ideals of the men and women who built our nation. The man who dedicates himself to the service of God and his fellowmen will not only build a memorial that will outlast all metal and stone, but it will not only be a memorial to the past, but to himself."

Littlestown BACCALAUREATE SERVICE IS HELD AT LITTLESTOWN

The Rev. William C. Karns, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, presented the message at the baccalaureate service on Sunday evening at the Littlestown High School, when a large crowd attended. The service opened with a procession to the hymn of "The Church's One Foundation" with Jean Blocher as piano accompanist. The processionary march included the seniors, board of education, high school faculty, members of the Littlestown Ministerium and the school student body. The invocation was given by the Rev. Frank E. Reynolds, pastor of Redeemer's Reformed Church, followed with the group singing "A Charge to Keep I Have." The Scripture, St. Luke 12:15-21, was read by the Rev. G. Howard Koons, pastor of Christ Reformed Church. Prayer was offered by the Rev. David S. Kammerer. A vocal solo "The Lord Is My Light" was sung by Miss L. Marie Basehoar, accompanied by Ferree LeFevre, both of whom are members of the graduating class. The receiving of the evening's offering was in charge of the Rev. Harvey B. Simons, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, after which the audience sang "Open My Eyes That I May See."

The Rev. Mr. Karns spoke on "Making A Success of Living." He stated that "entering today's world it will be easy to develop a perverted idea as to what really matters in life, because materialism is so emphasized but the only things that really matter are the spiritual and moral values. It is quite likely that this new generation may be the last chance that God is giving the human race to rebuild its foundations in the truths of Christ, rather in the over emphasized competitive idea of 'dog eat dog.'" Rev. Karns said that the so-called "old-fashioned virtues have a lot to be said for them."

"One cannot flaunt the eternal, moral truths of God without having one's character blemished or even destroyed," the speaker said as he challenged the graduating class to avoid the sham and unrealness of the world which they enter, and urged them to develop real and natural virtues and to take Christ with them as their constant friend and companion."

The service concluded with the singing of "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me" and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Karns. The recessional march was to the hymn "Abide With Me."

SLAVE TRADING AND SMUGGLING FAR EAST WORRY

MANILA (AP)—Rumors of a sudden upsurge in piracy, smuggling and slave trading in the island-studded Celebes Sea have reached the foreign offices of three nations.

Comely Indonesian girls, kidnapped from their island homes, are said to be appearing in the harems of Moro (Mohammedan) chieftains on Mindanao Island in the Philippines.

The girls command high prices on the illicit slave market. They reportedly are plucked from Indonesian coastal villages by bold Moro pirates who slip in under cover of darkness, then flee in small boats powered by brightly colored sails. Many elude naval patrol craft among the reefs and atolls.

There have been other ugly rumors of guns and ammunition flowing into seething West Irian (Dutch New Guinea), where the Dutch and Indonesians accuse each other of inciting the natives to revolt.

Both nations claim West Irian. Guns and bullets from the Philippines are reported to be in great demand—just as in the days when Indonesians were battling to win their independence from the Netherlands.

Smuggling, piracy and slave trading are an old story in the waters south of the Philippines. However, the problem became one requiring action at the diplomatic level because of reports that pirates and smugglers are branching out, coupled with unrest in West Irian.

Report Requested
The Philippines foreign office has asked Indonesia for a full accounting of reports that scores of Philippine citizens are in Indonesian jails.

In a campaign to stamp out pirates and smugglers, the Indonesian government has strengthened coastal patrols and reportedly has jailed anyone picked up without an official permit.

The drive was ordered originally to curb the depredations of Moro pirates who seized copra boats off Indonesia, then sold the cargoes in British North Borneo.

Indonesia wants the Philippines to do something about kidnappers. If the reports are true, the Moros could be expected to resist any attempt to interfere. While they are Philippine citizens, they never have been actually conquered.

The Spanish, the Americans, and finally the Filipinos all have tried without success to subdue the fierce Mohammedan warriors.

The Philippines national bureau of investigation and congressional committees have been probing smuggling activities. There never has been an official disclosure of what they found.

The Netherlands government is keenly interested and is making its own investigation. Both Indonesian and Netherlands diplomats have been in consultation with the foreign office here.

Sow Perennial Flowers When You Sow Vegetables

Throughout the year, perennial flowers provide the picturesque garden with its headline attractions—its tallest and largest show girls. And nearly all garden flowers that blossom in spring and early summer are perennials.

While many perennials will not "come true" from seed, and so are mother's day, and there is no more beautiful flower. The blue anchusa with forget-me-not flowers borne on tall spikes, look well with any other color, and make all other colors look better. Arabis and cerastium, which bear dwarf clumps of white flowers in the border; anthemis, yellow daisy; dianthus plumarius, the clove or grass pink; hesperis or sweet rocket, fragrant phlox-like flowers of white and lilac, borne in midsummer; hibiscus, the lovely blue linum, and lavender veronicas, all these flowers for the garden, not for cutting. They help enrich the beauty of the perennial border throughout the summer, each contributing its share to a beautiful whole.

Of these flowers you need many plants, and once they are established in your garden you will greet them with delight each year, when they come to pay you a brief visit. They will grow so vigorously you must hold them in check, by digging up overgrown clumps and dividing them with your friends and neighbors.

about 10 inches apart in the row. If grown for silage, sunflowers may be grown in rows narrower than corn for the same purposes. Yields of silage run from 15 to 19 tons per acre.

Much experimentation is needed to determine the best kinds and rates of fertilizer for sunflowers. If the soil is fertile and deep, no fertilizer is necessary. However, a few plants should be given acid phosphate, another few an application of 4-12-4 in the row, also a few should be side dressed with nitrate of soda during the growing period. The editor will appreciate news of the various results next fall.

Sunflowers for silage should be harvested when 60 to 75 percent of the plants are still in bloom and seeds of the more advanced heads are not yet beyond the soft dough stage. Heads for seed production should not be cut until the seed is matured. Then they should be suspended in a well ventilated room or shed to dry thoroughly before they are threshed. Or they may be held intact for feeding directly. Quail like to feed on the seeds from the unthreshed heads hung in sheltered nooks over winter.

MORE ABOUT ROOT MAGGOTS

Since a recent article appeared here, recommending various measures for controlling the destructive cabbage root maggot, several readers have written the editor to inquire if the mercuric chloride (corrosive sublimate) treatment would likely transmit poison dangers through the soil to the matured cabbage. This is a standard question. It is asked many times every year. At this time it suggests a brief review of how the root maggot may be combated without resort to poisons of any kind.

The root maggot that attacks young cabbage plants, causing them to wilt over and die, also infests turnips, radishes, cauliflowers, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, kale and other related plants of the crucifer group, although cabbage, radish, and turnip plants usually suffer the major damages, with early cabbage and late radishes and turnips most likely to be ravaged.

There is no known way to wage war on the small fly that lays the egg from which the small legless borer or maggot hatches. The main aim of all control measures is to prevent the egg's hatching or to kill the small larva before it begins to feed on the plant base and larger roots. To gain these ends three remedial measures are employed of which the mercuric chloride treatment is but one.

First, gardeners who have but a few early cabbage plants to protect may easily and inexpensively render them free from root maggot attacks by fitting 3- or 4-inch squares or disks of ordinary tarred roofing paper around the plant stems and pressing the shields flat against the soil to prevent the fly's depositing her eggs near the base. Of course, this method of protection is impractical for large plantings.

A slit is cut in the center of each square or disk and there two or three crosscuts are made to form a snugly fitting opening around the plant stem. The protector may be fitted before or immediately after transplanting and, as already stressed, pressed close to the soil. The corrosive sublimate (or mercuric chloride) treatment refers to pouring a half teaspoonful of a 1:1000 solution of this chemical around each plant soon after transplanting and repeating the application 10 to 12 days later. The idea is to saturate the soil immediately around the base and thereby destroy the eggs when they are later laid or to kill the maggots if the eggs hatch.

But because this is a deadly poison, the editor usually recommends a calomel solution applied in a similar manner. Calomel is dissolved in water at the rate of one ounce to 10 gallons. The vigorously stirred solution (half a teaspoonful) is poured around each plant after transplanting and repeated 10 to 12 days later. This may also be poured among plants still in the bed or along rows of radishes, turnips or other crucifers likely to be attacked by the root maggot. By using a long-spouted can, the calomel solution is easily applied among small seedlings in window boxes, coldframes or other plant beds.

Because the root maggot is the subject of much concern among home vegetable gardeners, the editor invites all related questions readers may wish to ask to clear up doubtful points. Please enclose an addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

WHY GROW SUNFLOWERS?

With the exception of soybeans, sunflower seeds are richer in digestible proteins than any other grain grown on American farms. Why this useful and ornamental plant is not more widely adopted in this country is truly a different matter to explain. As indicated, the seed is an excellent source of proteins, the seed yields a valuable oil of commerce, the residue after oil is extracted make fine cattle feed, the immature stalks and seed heads produce silage equal to corn in feeding value. And the seed heads may be stored and the grain fed whole or crushed to poultry, other domesticated fowls and to all wild birds over winter. No other grain is so relished by quail and other upland game birds.

In some parts of the world, but not in the United States so far as is known, sunflower seeds are roasted and eaten in the same manner as peanuts. The oil is one of the few vegetable oils which is suitable for human consumption without the somewhat complex and costly process of refining.

Two cultural facts should be stressed in plans to grow sunflowers for seed or silage: (1) Seed should be planted a week to 10 days before time to plant field corn; (2) The soil should be of a type that would grow a heavy crop of corn—well drained, deeply mellow, and liberally balanced with organic matter.

The editor visited a garden last summer where the housewife was utilizing sunflowers as supports for growing pole beans. She explained that they had no suitable timber on the farm for making poles and between sunflowers and field corn to support her Kentucky Wonder beans for canning and drying she preferred sunflowers. She reasoned that the sunflower seed would prove more valuable over winter for feeding poultry and friendly birds. Recently we stopped at the farm and her original judgment was substantiated. She said a large covey of quail had been daily visitors to the farmyard to feed on the welcome sunflower seed.

Sunflowers may be grown successfully in idle fence rows and particularly to provide shade along the poultry range. Or a few rows may be wisely planted in fields intended for truck crops or field corn. Seed should be planted rather thick so plants may later be thinned to stand multipled by dividing their roots, there is a long list which can be grown from seed as easily as radishes.

The time to plant these seeds is at the same time as the radishes, and right alongside them, if practical. They germinate best in the spring, being as hardy as oaks. With an early start they will be large enough to move to the garden border in the fall, and the following year will produce a full crop of blooms.

If you wait until summer, as many do, the difficulties of germinating seed and growing these plants will be much greater, and the plants will have less time to grow up before winter.

Nearly all the perennials which can be grown from seed are native forms, collected originally as wild plants, and improved only by selecting the finest plants as seed parents. Those which are the product of hybridizing will seldom come true from seed; but there are exceptions, such as delphiniums and hollyhocks, which have been fairly well fixed. Peonies and iris, by contrast, have never been true and to obtain named varieties, plants must be bought.

So there are relatively few new perennial varieties which you can produce from seed, but hundreds of lovely old ones, many in danger of being lost because the new generation of gardeners does not know their charm.

SOME SCHOOLS LET KIDS READ COMIC BOOKS

CHICAGO (AP) — These kids read comic books in school.

In an experiment conducted at Holy Name Cathedral grammar school, youngsters read colored comic books with teacher's permission. Their teacher says it is proving an aid to their education. It was found that children who read comic books improve their reading ability.

Of course, the school-sanctioned comics feature gentle fairy stories. Blood and thunder stories are taboo. "Uncle Charlie's Fables" is used as text.

Kids Are Heroes

In every story the kids are the hero and heroine. They win out over evil because they practice the ordinary virtues of honesty, industry and courage. The stories have enough excitement to intrigue the children but with happy endings.

The third and fourth graders are called on to read aloud. The class is under the direction of Sister Mary Victorice, who includes the comic book in regular classwork.

The dialogue in the books is written in good grammar. The art work inspires them to try their hand at it. Two weeks after the first book had been studied, the teacher asked the children to draw their favorite scene from the story.

"It was amazing," Sister Mary Victorice said, "to find that they remembered the smallest details of castles, moats, drawbridges and ships."

Tailored To Order

"Uncle Charlie's Fables" are tailored to order by Charles Biro, artist and author. He produces the classroom version of Leverett Gleason, president of Lev Gleason Publications, New York City. Gleason estimates 80 million comic magazines are purchased each month.

"Authorities in the comics field contend comic magazines are the most influential medium of communication today," Gleason says. "I want to prove that the powerful influence of comic magazines on children can be utilized in a constructive way."

To Try Again With Aircraft Spotters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force, seriously worried over a week link in the nation's aircraft warning system, is going to try again to get the volunteer system of civilian aircraft spotters into round-the-clock operation by July. An attempt was made to start the full, 24-hour a day plane spotting system in 27 states on May 17, but was postponed when a number of state civil defense directors requested reconsideration of the plan. It is hard to get civilian volunteers.

Littlestown READ LETTER FROM BISHOP

The Rev. Fr. Edward J. Shanahan read a pastoral letter from the Rev. George L. Leech, Bishop of Harrisburg, at the Sunday morning masses in St. Aloysius Church. The letter concerned the appeal for seminary funds to be received next Sunday, Pentecost Sunday. Daily mass will be held at 7:30 a.m. Father Shanahan announced that he will present the sermon on the program "The Catholic Hour" over the Hanover radio station on Tuesday at 1:15 p.m. He will use as his subject "Aims Giving." Friday, Memorial Day, a legal holiday, there will be dispensations from the law of fast and abstinence. Saturday, the vigil of Pentecost, the law of fast and abstinence will be observed. The monthly meeting of St. Aloysius Parish Council of Catholic Women will not be held on Wednesday as previously planned due to the community Memorial Day services. The meeting will be held Thursday, June 5, at which time a covered dish supper will be held and the high school graduates of this year of the parish and their mothers will be guests.

Prior to the opening of the Community Midget Baseball League on Monday, June 2, the final practice will be held this evening at 6 o'clock on the playground. The team managers will be present to watch the teams work out. The field procurement committee composed of Wilbur E. Mackley, chairman, Roscoe W. Rutase, John R. Bloom and Frank E. Basehoar will be at the playground to make preparations to stage the games. All persons interested in helping the committee work on the field are asked to come to the playground this evening.

Harry Good, of town, received the Appreciation Day award on Saturday evening. Mr. Good received $46.

Council To Meet

The May meeting of the Littlestown Borough Council will be held

Big Vote Promising For Atlantic Pact

ROME (AP) — A bigger-than-expected first-day vote turnout gave Italy's Atlantic Pact government bloc a strong chance today to beat both Communists and neo-Fascists for control of Rome and Naples.

These are the major prizes in two-day local elections in 2,400 towns in Central and Southern Italy, Sicily and Sardinia. The voting ends today.

First results were not expected to be known until tonight.

REDS LOOKING TO MARS FOR NEW TV SHOWS

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet scientist has predicted people will soon be seeing the secrets of planets on their television sets.

"The day is not far off," said Kirill Andreev, "when Soviet scientists will see on the screens of television sets details of the secret landscapes of Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Pluto."

"The broadcast of the images will take place from an automatic rocket which will be sent out scouting into space."

He illustrated his prophecy with a number of pictures which, along with the discussion, appeared in an article published in Moscow called "Astronomy of Today and Tomorrow."

Future Cosmic Observatory

The scientists also revealed plans of a proposed cosmic observatory of the future located near an "artificial" planet.

Here, in a world without gravity, he explained, the construction of enormous reflectors will be possible. They will show the "smallest details" of the surface of the planets of our solar system.

Under these conditions, he explained, air will not be fogged and distort images. He also pictured it in a drawing.

Photographs Via Rockets

"Rockets with atomic motors shot out into space will bring us spectra of the sun photographed close up, photographs of the invisible side of the moon and samples of interplanetary space taken in un-investigated depths of the universe," he said.

"And still later we will ourselves burst out of bounds of the earth's gravity."

"On an artificial planet of the earth there'll be built observatories and whole astronomical cities."

No Air Blanket

"There astronomers of the future will not be hindered by the air blanket which does not permit ultraviolet rays to pass through it, nor earth dust, or smoke or soot of the cities."

"In the absolute quiet of cosmic space lighted by the strange blue light of the earth hanging in the heavens, scientists will open up a completely new chapter of science — the new astronomy of tomorrow."

WSB HOLDS SESSION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Wage Stabilization Board today called in industry and union leaders to determine whether workers should get special pay raises to compensate them for steadily increasing industrial output. The idea, being pushed by labor unions, is that workers should be allowed to share financially in improved production methods. President Truman and his Council of Economic Advisors endorsed the notion in reports earlier this year to Congress.

RIOTERS LOCKED UP

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Eleven ring-leaders in Saturday's riot at Idaho State Penitentiary were locked up in solitary confinement today. Most of the remaining participants in the four-hour riot were kept in their cells. Tear gas was used to break up the revolt after 300 convicts barricaded themselves in the recreation hall and adjoining license plate factory and began smashing windows, machinery and furniture.
